Python - Very long/unreadable character strings I just started learning Python and found myself frequently dealing with very long/unreadable character strings. I've looked up a few ways to do this, but I haven't seen a concise way to make character strings longer than, say, 32 characters. What is the best practice for this? A: You can extend your string by appending to it, using Python's += operator: s = "The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog." s += "And the great phrase said..." print s More options can be found in the string module documentation. A: Since Python 3, you can use the StringIO.StringIO class as a rich string type: >>> s = StringIO.StringIO("My long string.") >>> s >>> s.readline() # read the string "My long string." A: Do you have to truncate it and figure out how to display it? There are a couple of good string manipulation tools that will let you do whatever you want with a string: Use str.r 50b96ab0b6

The diboration of aryl iodides with the PMe3-diborane reagent, followed by cleavage of the P-aryl bond with triethylamine/HCl in ethanol, produced various P-heterocyclic aryl boronic esters. Diboranes of the form (OR2)B(OR3) were not effective for the diboration, while the use of the diborane (B(OR)2) resulted in the formation of corresponding P-heterocyclic boronic esters. The nucleophilicity and electron-withdrawing/donating properties of aryl iodides played a key role in the diboration. The diboration of weakly nucleophilic and electron-donating aryl iodides provided the corresponding P-heterocyclic boronic esters with moderate to good yields.
